ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A software-installing method can easily install a device driver and set a printing environment in a computer on an individual computer basis. A

5   template of a scenario, which describes procedures for installing the software, is produced. Data corresponding to parameters contained in the template is stored in an installation database. A scenario specific to each computer is produced by incorporating the data

10   acquired from the database into the parameters of the template.